STUDENTS RETURNED to the campus from Christmas vacation January 3 to wind-up the final three weeks of first semester and face a battery of final examinations.

In view of things the semester has gone fast. The announcement of Vernon R. Alden as Ohio University's new president and John C. Baker Day honoring the retiring president occupied the minds and activities of many making time seem to fly by faster. Then of course there were two vacations, Thanksgiving and just recently two weeks for Christmas.

HIGHLIGHTING the interim period was the purchase of the Hotel Berry by Ohio University, Dads' Weekend with James A. Zehr reigning as Honorary Father, performances of the American Ballet Theatre, Rise Stevens, the Alberneri Trio and the Stratford Festival Players' production of "The Pirates of Penzance" and 104 high school seniors and juniors on campus for the 11th Annual Ohio History Contest.

THE PURCHASE of the Hotel Berry came as a surprise to many. The 90-room structure in downtown Athens was purchased by the Ohio University Fund, Inc., for the future housing of advanced students and foreign visitors. "We believe the purchase is advantageous both to Ohio University and to the City of Athens, because it will convert an old hotel into very adequate quarters for students and special visitors to the campus without cost to the taxpayers of Ohio," President Baker explained. The OU Fund is a non-profit corporation which manages contributions and special grants to Ohio University.

JAMES A. ZEHR, father of OU senior Jill Zehr, reigned over Dads' Weekend November 17, 18 and 19 as Honorary Father. He was chosen for his desire "to give his children the education he was never able to afford." Zehr's college education started at Ohio University but ended abruptly a few months later when the banks closed and the depression began. Since then he has sent both his son and daughter to college. Jim is a sophomore at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa.

OHIO UNIVERSITY'S GRADUATE School was invited in December to become a member of the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States organized earlier in the year with 100 charter members. Ohio University will sit on the council with such prominent university's as the California Institute of Technology, Harvard University and Pennsylvania State University. Following right on the heels of this announcement came one that the Graduate School has been awarded nine new National Defense Fellowships to in turn be awarded to nine qualified students in September of 1962.

oper, associate professor of education, visited the Northern Region of Nigeria in November to assess the possibilities of developing a teachers' college there. Miss Allyne Bane, associate professor of home economics, delivered the first Faculty Lecture of this school year in November on "The Arbiters of Fashion." Dana A. Loomis, assistant professor of design, exhibited his abstract oil painting, "Fault—1959," at the 1961 Pittsburgh International Exhibition of Contemporary Painting and Sculpture at the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, Pa. Henry H. Lin, assistant professor of ceramics, and John J. Wenzel, a senior in ceramics from Lorain, O., were among five persons selected to receive grants of $1,000 each from the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This issue of the OHIO ALUMNUS was edited by Joann Conover Reiss, the assistant editor, who also serves as assistant in the Office of Information. She hastens to explain, however, that the apparent feminine touch of having articles on food and fashions actually is the result of long range planning done this summer. The fact that the articles appear in her issue is coincidental, and complaints from hard-nosed males should be addressed to the dead letter office.—DNK

THE COVER

Late this month the patter of little feet will echo through the halls of the Ohio University President's House. They will be the three children, ages 2, 5 and 8 years, of Ohio University's new president, Vernon R. Alden. Dr. Alden officially took over the reigns of the university the first of January.

THE OHIO ALUMNUS is published monthly in October, November, December, January, March, April, May & June by the Ohio University Alumni Association. The annual subscription rate of $4.00 includes membership in The Ohio University Alumni Association Remittance should be made by check or money order payable to The Ohio University Alumni Association, P.O. Box 285, Athens. Entered as second class matter. October 3, 1923, at the post office at Athens, Ohio, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Printed at The Lawhead Press, Inc., Athens, Ohio.

THE LARGEST single gift in the 157-year history of Ohio University will provide an "incentive to quality" in the name of Dr. John C. Baker.

Announcement of the endowment was a surprise highlight of a day of surprises, in which alumni, faculty, students and friends honored the retiring president and his wife.

It was Baker Day, Friday, November 17. A capacity audience in Memorial Auditorium had gathered for a program sponsored by the Board of Trustees.

The audience had heard an exciting address by President Deane W. Malott of Cornell University, a long-time friend of Dr. Baker. A telegram from President John F. Kennedy had been read, and Dr. Baker had received surprise awards from both the Army and the Air Force. The Founders' Citation, highest recognition ever bestowed by Ohio University, together with the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, had been conferred upon Dr. Baker.

Then Edwin L. Kennedy, alumnus, trustee, and president of the OU Fund, Inc., stepped to the rostrum. In a quiet voice he announced that he and his wife, also a graduate of Ohio University, are establishing the John C. Baker Endowment Fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy prefer not to name the amount of the substantial endowment, but it is believed to be the largest in OU history.

A "Distinguished Professorship Award" established by Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy in 1959, is to become a part of the John C. Baker Fund. Use of the remainder of the money will be left to the discretion of the University.

The donors ask "only that it be used in the spirit of the man whose name it will bear, whose contribution to the University and American education can best be described as a constant search for ways to attain advancing standards of excellence."

Mr. Kennedy, a partner in Lehman Brothers, New York City investment house, told the convocation audience that "We do this as a tribute to John Baker's leadership, as a symbol of his inspiration, as an expression of belief in the ideals of education he stands for—in recognition that an ever-increasing accomplishment brings ever-increasing needs. It is our prayer that Ohio University may make an ever richer and more powerful contribution to our Democratic Society."

He also announced that he and Mrs. Kennedy intend to increase the amount periodically as they see evidence of its results.

A graduate of 1926, Mr. Kennedy has played an active role in the encouragement of quality education. He was the primary figure in re-organizing a strong alumni chapter in New York City, and served two terms as national president of the Ohio University Alumni Association (1956-58). In 1959 he was named by Ohio Governor Michael V. DiSalle to the OU Board of Trustees, for a term ending in 1966. He has been president of the OU Fund, Inc. since 1959.

Mrs. Kennedy, the former Ruth Zimmerman, graduated from Ohio University in 1927.

formal dinner that followed were Ohio Governor Michael V. DiSalle and representatives of his cabinet, Ohio Supreme Court Justices Kingsley Taft, James Bell and C. William O'Neill, Former U.S. Ambassador to Holland Philip Young, Columbia Gas Company President George Young, General Brooke Allen, and other distinguished businessmen, government officials, industrialists and educators.

Fred H. Johnson, chairman of the Board of Trustees which sponsored the Baker Day celebration, presided at the convocation and the dinner.

A final surprise for the honored guests came when Trustee John W. Galbreath presented Dr. and Mrs. Baker with a gold key to a new automobile from trustees and several alumni and friends.

In the convocation address, Cornell President Malott spoke of "the intellectual mission of a free university" and the part President Baker has played in the "emphasis of intellectual values."

"The admiration he has created has caused a group of his old friends to gather here on the Ohio University campus, where there is such tangible evidence of what he has wrought in the way of physical facilities and intellectual and spiritual strength," President Malott said.

The invocation was given by Dr. Robert N. Montgomery, president of Muskingum College, and the benediction by the Very Rev. Paul L. O'Connor, president of Xavier University. Dr. Howard F. Lowry, president of the College of Wooster, presented greetings from the Ohio College Association. Dr. Charles H. Wesley, president of Central State College, spoke in behalf of the other state universities of Ohio.

The Founder's Citation and honorary doctorate were presented by Gordon K. Bush, senior member of the Board of Trustees.

The spirit of the occasion was reflected in the Citation, which read, in part:

"Native son of Pennsylvania, guided by a benevolent destiny to serve as the fourteenth President of Ohio University for its greater glory and fuller realization of its resolute ideals as conceived by the University's founders over 150 years before, and chartered in the Ordinance of 1787.

By his imagination—Ohio University expanded its service for higher education by establishing branches in six cities within the State and instituted a teacher training program in Nigeria.

By his administrative acuity—Ohio University experienced its greatest physical growth.

By his unremitting effort—Ohio University gained new academic eminence among institutions of higher learning.

By his Scholarly Wisdom—the state of Ohio received his guidance by his chairmanship of the Governor's Commission for education beyond the high school.

By his statesmanship—Ohio University was honored by his distinguished service in the high councils of world affairs at Geneva.

By his humanity—the lives of countless students have been ennobled.

By his spirit—Ohio University shall forever be vitalized.

For these attributes of the image of the man, John Calhoun Baker, the image shall endure and be revered as long as Ohio University shall endure."

DR. LEHMAN

SINCE ITS ESTABLISHMENT in 1959, an outstanding group of five Ohio University professors have been able to pursue travel, research, writing and painting under the Distinguished Professor Award Fund, recently made an integral part of a larger fund by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Kennedy, named in honor of retiring OU President John C. Baker.

Persons who received the cash award of $1500 and/or a semester's leave of absence, as well as the privilege to place the title "Distinguished Professor" after their names, are:

DR. PAUL M. KENDALL. Dr. Kendall, a professor of English, coupled his award with a Guggenheim Fellow and is presently spending a year in Europe. Completing research and work on a biography of King Louis the XI there, he is also editing dispatches of Milanese ambassadors at the Court of Louis the XI for the Instituto Storico Italiano of Rome.

DR. HARVEY C. LEHMAN. Dr. Lehman, now an emeritus professor of psychology, retired the same year he received the distinction and accepted the $1500 cash award which he placed in his own general research fund. Out of this fund he is drawing support for work on a book entitled "Man's Creative Years." It is the second segment of an overall study on the ages at which man achieves the most intellectually. It deals with men presently living, his first book "Age and Achievement" having dealt with men of the past.

DR. R. L. MORTON. Dr. Morton, now an emeritus professor of education, also retired the same year he received his award. He applied his $1500 cash prize to the outlay for a 33-day around-the-world trip last December. Highlights were a visit to Ohio University's Nigerian Teacher Training Project, a tour of Kenya and Uganda in East Africa and New Zealand. In the latter he compared that country's series of textbooks on elementary school arithmetic to those that he was senior author of in this country.

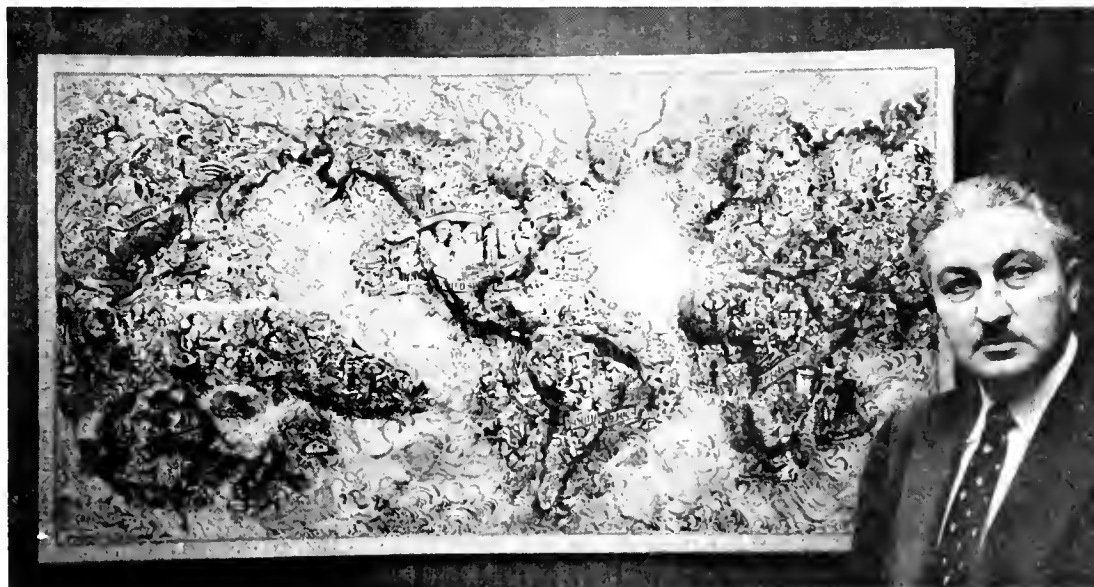

DR. JOHN F. CADY. Dr. Cady, a professor of history, applied his award to a trip to London, England, last February where he worked at the University of London's School for Oriental and Africa Studies, completing research for his forthcoming book dealing with "The Introductory History of Southeast Asia."

DWIGHT MUTCHLER. Mr. Mutchler, a lecturer in drawing, spent three months of his semester's leave of absence in Europe visiting art museums and painting. Visiting Spain, Italy, France and England, he says, "I was interested in seeing as many paintings as I could." Mr. Mutchler visited galleries, large and small, and talked with numerous contemporary artists in Italy and France. The other part of his leave was spent at home painting prior to going to Europe.

Ohio University's kitchens prepare 13,500 pounds of food per meal for 75 percent of the student body

What's

GENERATIONS AND GENERATIONS have passed now . . . enough on which to assume that griping about dormitory food is a tradition in the university scene and not based on reality.

Last May an entourage of mothers supported this assumption with a surprise inspection of food and services in dormitories. Their comments went like this: "I got a good impression of the food." . . . "Students are too well fed, if such a thing is possible." . . . "The meals are well prepared." . . . "I thought the food was excellent."

Just what does it take to feed 8860 hungry mouths? How can quality be achieved in quantity?

The seven Ohio University kitchens serve roughly 75 percent of the student body, or satisfy 5,311 appetites. In one meal around 13,500 pounds of food are consumed. Broken down in courses, this would be 1625 pounds of roast beef, 4000 pounds of mash potatoes, 1600 pounds of asparagus, 4800 pounds (600 gallons) of milk, 410 pounds of lettuce and 1110 pounds of apples for pies.

The 5,311 that consume this food also consume the culinary art of 123 cooks and the meal planning of Margaret Davis, director of residences services, Jean Vance, supervising dietitian, and their menu committee.

Menu's are planned a month ahead. Careful consideration is given to those foods in season, cost and the likes and dislikes of their "consumers."

In an average family, Johnny might dislike beets or Susie might be watching her waistline and avoiding fattening desserts. At a university these are magnified a hundred times over. There are numerous Johnnys and what girl doesn't watch her waistline!

A Choice of Dishes

The menu committee always tries to offer a choice in dessert and salads at each meal and a choice of vegetables when a not-so-popular one as egg plant is served. There is a choice of main dishes on Fridays and when pork or lamb is on the menu. At dormitories where there is a concentration of foreign students from the Far East, rice is available as an alternate with potatoes.

Well-balanced meals and variety are prime concerns of the menu committee. They are constantly gleaning women's magazines, trade journals and cookbooks for new and different recipes. Usually the cost of a cookbook is worthwhile if one new and well-received dish is found.

The food buyer studies the month's menus, estimates the quantities needed and orders the food. Last year approximately $159 thousand was spent on milk alone and $1,418,225 on all food.

Most ordering is done through a "wholesaler" or "broker," but for certain things it is done directly from the source, as pineapples from the Hawaiian Islands. A great deal of the food ordered comes out of Columbus, O., and whenever possible products are obtained from the local Athens area. All milk, eggs and ice cream come from a local dairy. Bread and donuts are purchased from a Marietta bakery (there being no bakery in Athens) and all other bake goods made in the university kitchens.

It's interesting to note, with increased talk of preparedness in case of an enemy attack, that Ohio University could feed all of its students for one full semester. Can goods are purchased for the entire five-month period, so there is enough canned meat, vegetables and fruit to provide balanced meals over that period of time.

Buys Three Grades of Meat

Fresh meat is purchased on the basis of quotations supplied by six to eight suppliers at the beginning of the school year. The university usually purchases three grades: the utility grade being used for hamburger and the prime and choice grades for all other cuts. If the supplier is by chance out of the grade ordered he always completes the order with the next higher grade.

A week's supply of meat is ordered the week before and delivered by refrigerated rail cars. Upon delivery it is checked by the university's sanitarian for quality and to see that it is stored properly.

Once the Athens Ice and Storage Company building, the Ohio University storeroom contains four storage areas, two walk-in deep freezers, three regular walk-in freezers and an ice room. The ice room can produce 90 tons of ice at one time, all in 300-pound cakes. Approximately 2,000 pounds of ice are used daily in crushed form . . . and this is in addition to the four or six ice machines operating in several of the kitchens.

Cooking?

By Joann Conover Reiss

The seven university kitchens send orders for food to the storeroom the day before it is to be prepared and served. A staff of 10 men assemble the orders and four butchers prepare the meat for delivery in the morning.

The morning cooks are usually busy with the noon meal when the order is delivered and checked into the kitchen storeroom. At 10 a.m. the night cooks arrive to start preparation of the evening meal.

All university kitchens are under the direction of a dietitian and at least one assistant dietitian. They oversee the work in the four work areas: preparation, pastry, salad and range.

Preparation means the initial preparation of food, such as peeling potatoes, grinding dry bread, chopping celery or cleaning chickens. In familiar Army terms, it's "K.P." The three or four persons working in this area generally are in training and will later advance to one of the other three areas as specialty cooks.

The salad cooks do as their titles designate: prepare all salads. The pastry cooks handle all rolls, cakes, pies and so forth . . . and the range cooks handle all other cooking.

The equipment of one dormitory kitchen is an amazing assemblage. Three steamers stand approximately six feet high and are used to cook vegetables, potatoes and rice, for example. They operate on the double-boiler principle with steam traveling between the outer and inner layers of the huge kettle.

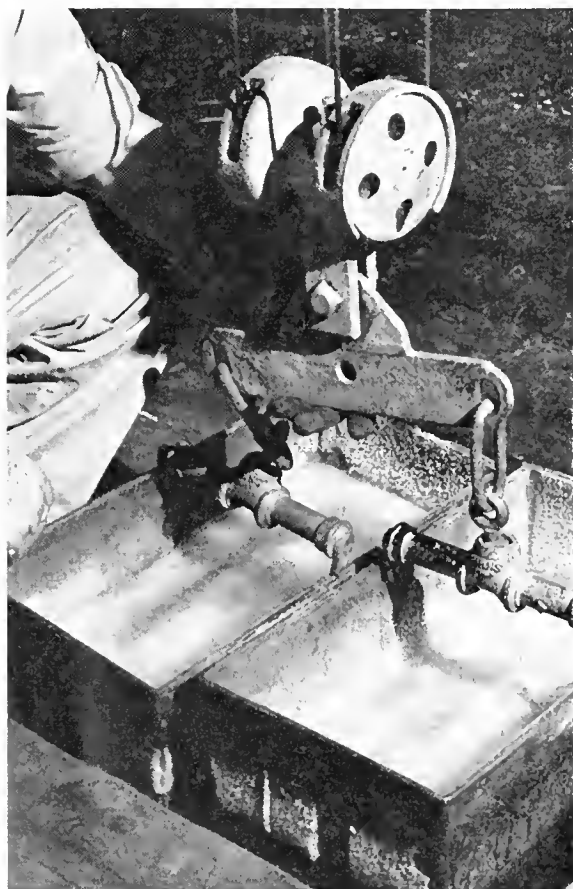

FOURTEEN PERSONS comprise the menu committee. Sitting left to right are Audrey Diebler, Herb Eglie, Jean Vance, Eva Nye, Margaret Davis, Shirley Walters, Jacqueline Gerold, Moble Bishop, Dolores Mansour and Esther Myers. Not present were Marie Straup, Freda Gibbs and Alice Macklin.

Three french fryers stand approximately four feet high and can deep fry 30 pounds of food at one time. Five gallons of oil are used in each fryer. An oven with rotating shelves can bake 80 pies at one time and hot and cold pass-throughs facilitate keeping the food warm until serving. In addition, there are large grills, broilers, hot tables and refrigerators.

Six of the seven kitchens operate in much the same manner, preparing three meals a day for a pre-determined number of students. Jefferson and Shively Hall cafeterias serve the largest number, 1301 and 1298 respectively. Next are the Scott Quadrangle and Howard Hall kitchens with 520 and 573 respectively. Bryan Hall and Lindley Hall cafeterias serve 414 and 452 students.

The exception is the University Center kitchen. It must provide, in addition to the regular student menu, two special menus for the University Club Dining Room and another for any special parties. Close to 2,000 meals are prepared daily for the 625 students in the cafeteria and the 175 diners in the University Club Dining Room. Last year special parties totaled 481 and accommodated 6,154.

The University Club Dining Room is self-supporting, as is all the cafeteria kitchens on the campus. On big weekends such as Homecoming, Mothers' and Dads' Weekends, as high as 1200 people have been served there. The seating capacity is 97 at one sitting and for overflow the Omicron Delta Kappa room, the private dining room adjacent to the main room and, in extremely crowded cases, the ballroom are used.

BENEATH THE FLOOR of the ice room 90 tons of ice in 300-pound cakes are made in one freezing. The daily need of the seven university kitchens is 2,000 pounds of ice in crushed form.

EACH MORNING men from the university storeroom deliver the order placed the day before. This food is carefully categorized and shelved for use later that day.

Last year the busiest months at the University Club Dining Room were October and April, with November and December running close seconds because of the Christmas activities.

Last year Ohio University joined the ranks of a few other universities by hiring a full-time sanitarian to set up a program of constant sanitation checks. His duties are varied but primarily center around the inspection of food both at the point of receipt . . . the storeroom . . . and the point of preparation and serving . . . the kitchen.

It's easy to spot spoiled meat in your home refrigerator and toss it into the garbage can. But at a university spoiled meat could mean the loss of several hundreds of dollars. And, if it was ever served, the cost of many a sick student.

The sanitarian is the apple that will keep the doctor away. He takes monthly milk samples to see that it meets adequate standards, makes swab tests on dishes, silverware and glasses for bacteria, visits the sources of meat and regularly inspects the kitchens, with the dietitians doing self-inspection between visits.

Food consumed to the tune of approximately 13,500 pounds per meal impulsively brings to mind the thought . . . "big business." But no, there is no monetary profit . . . just the hint of a satisfied look on the face of a student as he glances at the steak and then whines, "Peas . . . againnnn!"

THE WORK in a university kitchen is divided into four work areas: preparation, salad, pastry and range. Preparation is the initial preparation of food, salad is salad making, pastry is all baking and range is all other cooking.

Bobcat Roundup

By Rowland Congdon, '49

BECAUSE IT HAS BEEN two months since the last "Bobcat Roundup" due to the special issue on retiring president John C. Baker, the first part of this month's "Roundup" will include a brief review of the final outcome of the school's fall sports teams.

The football team closed with a 5-3-1 overall record in Bill Hess's fourth year as head coach. The 3-2-1 league record settled the Bobcats in fourth place, behind Bowling Green, Western Michigan and Miami, in the conference standings. Ironically enough, the Bobcats had only one point separating them from first place.

They lost to champion Bowling Green, 7-6, tied Western Michigan, 20-20, and defeated Miami, 28-18. They defeated Toledo and Marshall and lost to Kent State, in an early season upset, 23-17. Kent finished last in the standings.

This proved to be one of the closest races in league history and the first time that the league champion was not undefeated. In OU's unusual season, they failed to win a game in four tries at home, but had a tie. Their five victories were all achieved on the road, with the win over Miami being the easiest. Up until last year an Ohio U. team had not defeated Miami in football since 1942. Now the Bobcats have taken two in a row from their arch rivals.

Also, the Bobcats' three defeats were by a total of 10 points and the five wins by a total of 23 points.

Selected as most valuable player for the 1961 season was Jim Pugh, Marietta senior guard. The 6-1½, 220-pound Marine veteran also received awards as lineman of the week against Dayton, and Bobcat and lineman of the week against Western Michigan. He was also named to the first all-conference team along with teammate Ted Stute.

A pair of junior ends, John Trevis, of Youngstown, and Ken Smith, of Euclid, were chosen by their teammates as co-captains for 1962. A total of 29 players lettered, including six sophomores, 12 juniors and 11 seniors. So 18 lettermen will return to form a nucleus for the 1962 team. Along with some expected fine help from the freshman team, a couple of whom are potential starters, the Bobcats might get back in contention once again next year.

Ohio's cross country team finished higher than any previous Bobcat cross country team in the conference standings. They tied Miami for second place, with Western Michigan getting the championship. Ray Fleming, Akron junior, was OU's best runner all year and he finished third in the conference meet. All of the varsity team will return next season, so improvement should be shown with a good chance of bringing the school its first Mid-American Conference cross country championship.

In a quadrangular meet with Kent State, Bowling Green and Pittsburgh, OU finished first. In a triangular meet with Ohio State and Michigan State, OU finished second. They defeated Central State and West Virginia in dual meets and lost to Miami in a dual contest. The Bobcats were second in the Notre Dame Invitational.

The soccer team compiled a 6-4 overall record, 5-2 in the Ohio Inter-Collegiate Soccer Association, good for third place. They do not compete in the Mid-American Conference as OU is the only league school that plays soccer.

Soccer victories were over Denison, Kenyon, Ohio State, Slippery Rock, Wilmington and Dayton, while defeats were by Pittsburgh, Oberlin, Akron and Michigan State. Two Bobcats were selected to the All-Ohio first team. They were John Haynes, center forward from London, England, a sophomore, and junior goalie Roger Berthold, from Sylvania.

All of the winter sports teams had opened their seasons at this writing. The basketball squad had a 3-4 record with one win and no losses in conference play. The wrestlers had won their only outing, a quadrangular tournament with Marshall, Denison and Columbus YMCA, while the swimmers finished fourth in the conference relays.

With two sophomores starting in the important forward spots and lettermen at the other three positions, OU's basketball team, Mid-American Conference champions two straight years, lost their opener to Canisius at Buffalo, N. Y., 72-59.

Then they won three in a row. They defeated Marshall, 68-57, at Huntington, W. Va., in the conference opener. They followed with a 60-56 win over Morehead at Morehead, Ky. This was against a team that had averaged 103 points a game. In the home opener, the Bobcats downed St. Francis, of Pennsylvania, 80-79, on a last second field goal by Center Stacy Bunton.

Then, the three-game road trip preceding Christmas found three losses added to the wrong side of the ledger. These were to Wichita, 58-55, Nebraska, 81-64, and Loyola of Chicago, 77-69. Four nights after losing to Wichita that team defeated defending national champion, Cincinnati, on the same floor, 52-51.

Leading the scoring after seven games were senior guards and tri-captains Dave Katz of Cleveland Heights with 89 points and Bill Whaley of Athens, 87. Sophomore forward Jerry Jackson of Corning was close behind with 86 points while sophomore forward Paul Storey of Xenia had 71. Jackson and Storey were leading the rebounding with 59 and 56 respectively.

Coach Fred Schleicher's wrestling team compiled 67 points in its opener. Denison had 61, Marshall 54 and Columbus YMCA 12. Winners for OU were Don Siebert of East Liverpool at 137 pounds, Dick Vlasak of Brecksville at 147, Chuck Ronyetz of Cleveland Rhodes at 167, and Harry Houska of Parma at 177. The Bobcat representative in each of the eight weight classes is a sophomore.

With four lettermen graduated and five others lost because of ineligibility or transferring, the swimmers may be hard pressed to retain their conference title. All-American diver Chuck Woodlee is back for his senior year but has been slowed by mononucleosis. In the conference relays, Bowling Green was first with 75 points, Kent State second with 54. Miami had 44, OU 28 and Western Michigan 25.

The Icemen Cometh

By Dennis Shere

HOCKEY, A CANADIAN FAN'S answer to baseball, has been gaining popularity at American universities in recent years and Ohio University is no exception. The Bobcat icers have grown accustomed to playing before capacity crowds at the O. C. Bird Arena, which seats 1200.

OU hockey comes under a club classification, which means the players do not receive any financial aid from the University. Despite this, a number of outstanding skaters are attracted to the campus. Two, who are the leading scorers this season, transferred from other schools to play hockey at OU.

Senior co-captain Bing Carlson, a real crowd pleaser, previously attended Detroit Tech as a freshman. Senior Dick Hendrie, another crowd favorite, enrolled after a freshman year at Alabama.

These two, plus a number of other solid icers, make Ohio a good bet to capture an unprecedented third consecutive Ohio Intercollegiate Hockey Association championship. The competition in OIHA play comes from such schools as Ohio State, Dayton and Denison.

Coach John McComb also manages to schedule games with other rugged opponents outside of the league each winter. This year's Christmas vacation found the Bobcats traveling east for games with Cornell, Army and Rutgers.

A quick glance at the roster shows that most of the players come from within the state, mostly from Cleveland. Carlson and Junior Joe Zieleniewski hail from Detroit, Mich.; Hendrie, the only Canadian on the team, from Toronto, Ontario; and Ken Arvidson, a freshman, from McComb's hometown of Norwood, Mass.

There's always plenty of excitement at OU hockey games. The Bobcats are an offensive-minded team that likes to roll up the score, and Junior Goalie Bill Gurnick from East Cleveland is one of the finer puck-stoppers in the OIHA. The Bobcats don't like to be pushed around, either, and get involved in their share of ice brawls.

Dick Hendrie and Bing Carlson

The New Year Look

TODAY'S COLLEGE WARDROBE conveys a desire for freedom of movement, gaiety and distinction. It definitely has that American look that Ohio University's own fashion authority Miss Allyne Bane comments is "right for the fast modern pace and lively leisure that are ours." College coeds have gone to shorter fuller skirts and called them kilts and knee ticklers. College men have found a very versatile shirt that has a point of distinction . . . pointed tails in front and back. For that touch of sophistication college women have adopted the short hair . . . bouffant style, or long hair . . . beehive style, and men the black suede hat and a quaint . . . if not odd . . . pipe. These things coupled with the old standbys of about five years . . . sneakers (dirty), bermuda shorts and (for men) sweatshirts turned inside out with sleeves torn off . . . paint the American collegian with that American look of 1962.

A mixture of the old and the new gives Ohio University students

KNEE TICKLERS: "No need to worry about the hem line, they can't go much higher and the knee can't be any lower."

TORN-OFF SWEATSHIRT SLEEVES: "It all started when this fella went East for a weekend and came back wearing"

DIRTY SNEAKERS: "We don't have time to wash them, we're too busy studying."

POINTED SHIRT-TAIL JACKETS: "Versatile, comfortable. It can be worn to class as a shirt and serve double duty as a jacket."

KILTS: "Comfortable . . . easy to walk and 'Twist' in."

BURLAP SKIRTS: "It's original, something new. A kind of status symbol. A fad."

Alderman Selected Miami's Dad of the Year

OUT OF SIGHT but not out of mind, Dr. William E. Alderman, '09, may have retired as dean of the College of Arts and Science at Miami University, Oxford, O., but he certainly has not been out of the mind of students there.

In November he was chosen by the Miami student body to be honored as Miami Dad of the Year during the university's annual Dads' Day celebration. Special recognition came at the Dads' Day football game between Miami and the University of Toledo, when 2300 musicians of 28 high schools and Miami University paid tribute to him.

Additional recognition included the presentation of a life-size color photograph of Dr. Alderman for permanent display in Miami's Upham Hall as a gift from former colleagues and other friends.

Dr. Alderman has seen three of his four children and one grandson graduate from Miami University. He served Miami 23 years and in June of 1959, the year he retired, he was conferred a surprise honorary Doctor of Laws degree at commencement exercises.

Dr. and Mrs. Alderman continue to make their home in Oxford.

From Clerk To Vice President at Lazarus'

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO, when Floyd Gibson, '37, graduated from Ohio University and went to work in a clerical position at the huge Lazarus store in Columbus, the title and responsibilities of a vice-presidency of the company probably seemed rather remote.

In September of this year the 47-year-old Westerville, O., resident was named to that position. He continues to be general operating manager, a post which he has held for the past 22 months.

All totaled, Gibson's duties now consist of management of store properties, land acquisition, store maintenance, warehousing and such customer service functions as parking, delivery, workrooms, adjustment, mail and telephone order service.

Gibson's rise to his present position started in 1941 when he was made purchasing agent. In 1944 he rose to traffic manager, in 1949 he became assistant to management and in 1952 the duties of management of the Research Department were added. In 1954 he was named superintendent of the Bulk Service Building, in 1958, divisional operating manager of the garages, Bulk Service Building and Workrooms. In December of 1959 he was named general operating manager and now vice-president.

JOHN CONTE, CONNIE HAINES
AND JOEY RARDIN

By John Dengel, '41

The Emcee Who Makes People Happy

PROBABLY THE ONLY Athens boy ever to become proficient at Tahitian dancing is Joey Rardin, an Ohio University student from 1933 to 1936.

Joey, a member of the family which formed the Rardin Lumber Company so long a fixture in Athens, sang with Sammy Kaye's band in the old Varsity Inn below Logan's until a day when Vincent Jukes of the drama and speech department took him aside and said: "If show business is going to be your life, get out and learn it."

Joey went to Chicago, did song and patter shows for CBS and Mutual, traveled the United States two years as vocalist with Ben Bernie, "the old Maestro", then was in a few movies at 20th Century Fox.

The one-time Athens High School cheerleader and Ohio University freshmen track manager, singing at San Francisco's Palace Hotel when World War II came along, took over the Camel Caravan show entertaining troops.

As years passed he worked night clubs, theaters and hotels throughout the country before joining the Matson Navigation Company three years ago as what he terms "Admiral of the Leprechaun Navy."

As entertainment coordinator of the big white liners cruising to Hawaii and the South Seas, Joey has crossed a half-million miles of blue Pacific water as the emcee who helps make people happy.

Under the new Matson policy of providing top stars and floor shows for cruises, Joey shepherds the likes of Marie MacDonald, the Crosby brothers, Georgie Jessel, the King sisters, Johnny Desmond, Hoagy Carmichael, and Gordon MacRae.

Home port for Joey is Los Angeles where someday he hopes to be ashore in time to entertain at an alumni chapter fete. Rardin's wife, Patricia, daughter of movie and TV character actor Pat Malone, lives in nearby Burbank.

"Wonderful," Joey recalls of his visit "home" to Athens last spring (1961) to see "old friends and the old school."

Greatly impressed with the University's drama and speech building and its radio and TV stations, old broadcaster Rardin remembers with pride: "The students do a better job of management and programming than I have seen in 90 percent of the commercial stations."

Joey also sat a spell with Vincent Jukes, the man who had sent him out to a world of entertainment stretching south of the Equator and west to Australia.

Principal Figure In Sale of Vermont Paper

WE LOOKED A LONG TIME for a man with McClure's background and have watched with respect the growth of the Free Press over the past nine years of his association with the newspaper."

The praise is of a man, an Ohio University graduate, who was the principal figure in the first complete sale of the Burlington Free Press in Burlington, Vt., in 108 years. That sale was made in September to J. Warren McClure, '40.

Assuming the presidency of the new corporation controlling the Vermont paper and the post of publisher, McClure reaches the peak of his career with the Free Press which started in 1952.

He joined the Free Press as advertising manager having left a post as assistant to the publisher of the Grand Forks (N.D.) Herald. He was soon named business manager and then co-publisher of the Free Press with David W. Howe, who had controlled the newspaper since 1927 as trustee of the W. B. Howe Trust.

McClure holds a Master of Business Administration degree from Northwestern University and began his business career in the advertising department of Armour & Company in Chicago. During World War II he spent four years in the United States Navy after which he became editor of Radio Market Guide magazine in Chicago. From there he joined the staff of the Grand Forks paper and the Burlington paper.

Former-owner Howe stated, "The new owners of the Free Press have both a wonderful heritage and a great public trust and responsibility . . . I believe all former owners are proud, and New England should be proud, to have a newspaper owned and published by McClure and other long-time employees of the Free Press."

BRUNO A. BORNINO completed the final phase of six months active military training under the Reserve Forces Act program at the Air Defense center in Fort Bliss, Tex.

Referrals Built Him A Million-Dollar Business

A MAN WHO BELIEVES in the nine-to-five day delivered three $1,000,-000 business insurance policies for the New York Life Insurance Co. to push that company's sales over the $25 billion mark in September of this year.

Stanley Liss, '42, on the basis of referrals, has built up a million-dollar business since joining the New York company in 1948. Presently he is president of the New York Life's Top Club, an honor based on first-year commissions.

During the present club year Liss sold 108 Life policies for a value of $6,308,000. In 1951 he became a member of the NALU's Million Dollar Round Table, qualified for the Chartered Life Underwriter designation and contributed to the insurance company's history by closing its second group case.

Like many of his clients, the buyer of the group case had attended Ohio University with Liss. Many of his first clients in 1948 were OU classmates and since then "I've done a great deal of business as the result of recommendations they have given me."

Liss feels that prospecting through referrals accounts for the high persistency of his business and his 11 consecutive National Quality Awards. "My biggest policyholder is the result of a referral," comments Liss.

At five each day Liss joins his family at their rambling ranch home in Woodmere, N. Y. The evenings and weekends are spent away from business with his wife, Norma, and their two children, Ellen, 16, and Robert 12.

Alumnus Is Author of "Robbery on the Highway"

THE OHIO TOWN of Gnadenhutten, a little boy and a summer job have been skillfully interwoven to produce Paul L. Bennett's latest writing, a book entitled "Robbery on the Highway."

Published recently by Abelard-Schuman Limited, the book is intended to be a novel for young people, however, a reviewer says, "Readers of whatever age are apt to be caught up in the web of Mr. Bennett's narrative."

Writing has found Bennett, '42, a frequent contributor to numerous national magazines, including the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies Home Journal and the New York Times Magazine. By profession he is an associate professor of English at Denison University in Granville, O.

A member of the College English Association, Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Eta Sigma, Bennett holds a MA degree from Harvard University. He started teaching English as an instructor at the University of Maine and joined the Denison University faculty in 1947.

Knowledge of the wiles and ways of little boys that permeate the book could very well have been drawn from Bennett's experiences with his own two sons, Charles Kirby, 13, and William David, 10. Bennett is married to the former Jeanne Leonhart, '41.

JUDITH L. HUMMEL teaches fourth grade at the Elyria Elementary School in Elyria, O.

Are

. . and Why

We Need You

Endowment Fund:

The Endowment Fund is a reservoir of money with its principal amount invested and only the interest or income being used for the benefit of Ohio University. There is no maximum amount needed—quality universities with millions invested in such a program still add funds yearly. The Fund encompasses all other areas of need including the following.

volumes and purchase of new volumes—he received an appropriation of $76,500. With the enrollment doubling in the last ten years, the number of volumes has advanced from 219,000 to 320,000—an increase of only 46 percent. Needed immediately is at least $30,000.

Research:

The Director of Research estimates a need for a minimum of eight fellowships in the next three years which should carry a stipend of at least $3000 each per year. Equipment, materials and other needs to support these fellowships are estimated at $12,500 for the same period. This totals $36,500 needed during the next three years, or a total of $12,166 per year.

Scholarship Funds:

The Director of Financial Aids pinpoints an immediate need of $24,000 yearly just to bring the existing scholarships to the value held in 1954. In addition, due to the great increase in enrollment, another $15,000 yearly is needed.

Library Improvement:

Last year the Librarian asked the state for a minimum of $100,000 for building improvements, maintenance of

Faculty Encouragement:

The State of Ohio provides the basic salary—but, the basic salary now is not the deciding factor to a faculty member. The key is extras such as the Edwin L. and Ruth E. Kennedy Distinguished Professor Award. Needed for this purpose is a minimum of $30,000 per year.
